Cabin Hill

A prime example of the complete Mastercraft roofing service.

The roof on this apartment building was built with traditional cut rafters to maximise the accommodation in the roof space. Tegral blue/ black fibre cement slates were chosen and a dry fix ventilated Club Crest ridge tile with Fleur Delys ball finials were fitted to all ridges.

Cargagreevy Road

Simple yet impressive, would best describe this traditional timber cut roof. The Bangor Blue 'Celtic' slates chosen compliment the natural stone surroundings of this private residence.

Ballyknock

The Penrhyn slate commonly known as 'Bangor Blue' was selected for this 5000ft² dwelling. A mix of attic trussed rafters and traditional cut timbers were the ingredients used to build the roof structure and lead rolls were used on ridges and hips to add character.

IET Savoy Place London

The IET is the professional society for the engineering and technology community. The idea of the refurbishment of their building was to allow for London's most technologically advanced 90,000ft² of event and conferencing space as well as administration facilities for its 150,000 members.

Mastercraft Construction worked on the roofing aspect of the prestige project as well as the interior joinery.

The bespoke roofing element was carefully carried out to the high spec design and built to fit in seamlessly with the surrounding buildings and existing structure.

Royal County Down Golf Club

Mastercraft was awarded the roofing contract to the 4000ft² extension to the Club House to improve hospitality facilities at this golf resort in Co. Down. Rosemary Clay tiles were used throughout the contract.

Pollin House

A special tile for a special roof. Keymer handmade clay tiles were carefully chosen for this outstanding private residence.

The dormers were covered in lead rolls and in the roof construction cut timbers were used to frame the roof with an exposed Douglas Fir rafter detail to the eaves

Children's Hospice Glengormley

The Children's Hospice roofing contract required the construction of a curved cut raftered frame, along with a curved plywood fabricated gutter section. All of this skilled work was carried out on-site by our dedicated team.

Victoria Square Belfast

Tergal slates were the preferred choice of roof covering on the apartment block at this Belfast City Centre landmark project. These photos demonstrate the high standard of the Mastercraft workmanship that was evident throughout the entire Victoria Square contract.
